Thesis Title: The Rationality of Anger
Pass with no corrections (Highest honour)
Supervisor: Prof. Lucy O'Brien
Examiners: Prof. Michael Brady and Prof. Susan James

The Rationality of Anger

The liberatory potential bestowed upon anger by feminist philosophers has not received sustained attention in analytic moral psychology. My doctoral thesis develops an empirically informed account of anger, and its rationality, that lays the foundations for the emotion to play the roles feminists afford it. Four main findings emerge: (i) the dominant conception of anger should be revised, (ii) anger is an effective and often constructive way of confronting social injustice, (iii) anger, as an emotion, enjoys a sui generis relation to its reasons, and (iv) this in turn allows anger to play distinctive and crucial epistemic roles.

Professional and Outreach Activities

Inclusion & Outreach

- Director of UCL Philosophy MAP (Minorities and Philosophy) chapter, 2016–2019, Activities included: Running reading group, holding panel discussions, lobbying for inclusive syllabi, training TAs in inclusive teaching practices, founding and hosting annual ‘Harriet and Helen Memorial Lecture’ and graduate masterclass. This public lecture is named in honour of John Stuart Mill’s wife and stepdaughter, and in honour of all neglected contributions to philosophy made by minority groups. The lecture has since become a staple departmental event, creating a previously lacking forum for MAP related research at UCL.
- Volunteer consultancy for women’s charity Alternative’s Trust in East London. Collaboration with three other researchers to help improve the charity’s everyday functioning as well as help attract funding. We put together an innovative evaluation framework to help quantify the value of the Trust’s various diverse services (including day care, food bank, counseling and legal services) which included a qualitative component. We directly helped the charity secure their largest funding ever: £120,000 from Lloyds Bank.

Further Event Organization

- Local organizer for 2024 annual conference of the European Society for the Philosophical Study of Emotions in Lisbon, Portugal, where I also organized the one-day pre-conference workshop on Feminist Philosophy of Emotion.
- Symposium on “Feminist Philosophy of Emotion” at 2024 American Philosophical Association, New Orleans.
- Co-founder of Luso-Leituras: Literatura Engajada em Língua Portuguesa. A Reading group that brings together native Lusophones and advanced Portuguese language students to read Lusophone literature from around the world. We read works of fiction that engage with important social issues, as a manner of learning and doing politics through literature.
- Founding member of Critical Emotion Theory Network, 2020, meeting once a month online. Brings together empirically informed emotion researchers working across different philosophical approaches interested in emotion, oppression and political action.
- Lead applicant and organizer of pre-conference ‘The Social Dimensions of Emotions’, at the 2019 International Society for Research on Emotion conference.
- Co-convenor for reading group on Mind and Psychology, UCL, 2015–2017.
